We apprehend that our New York contem porary looks upon this matter too gravely. We think these whistles are provided to keep abo-Litien cours e up. The blowing about conof racies from Indianapolis bas had no visible effect upon the pulsations of the great public heart, and now every member of the Union ague is to have a penny which, and upon electi n day they are to raise such au ul dation the whichle-fight clores to the codfish arist raey of the sheld, ites. A Fign.-On S aday, the 23d, the Unite States Hotel, in Washington, Missouri, owned by Mr. Heur, Kinsel, now in Idaho Territory, was consumed by fire. The rooms on the first and second loors of the building were occupied by two familie of white people, and the garret was filled with negroes. It is said the fire original mated from a stove in the upper part of the bullding, through the careles ness of a regroweulin. The house was built about eight years ago by Mr. Francis Tischler, at a cost of nearly $6,000, but was afterwards sold for $900. The building was not insured. Mr Kinsel's loss may be estimated at about $5,000.

CarAnother, comparatively private, trial of the Rodman 20-inch gun at Fort Hamilton, New York, was made Thursday afternoon. Two thots were fiel; one with the maximum charge of 125 pounds at point blank range. gar it will be seen, from an address which we now and in the long future-a full proof, if any pullish on the first page of this morning's such were needed, of the want of intelligence ournal, that the McClellan Electoral Ticket in on the part of the Administration, and of it Tennessee is withdrawn. The withdrawal is want of needful moral stamina for the proper not only wise and proper but necessary. Mr. discharge of the duties of the Executive D Lincoln has formally disfranchised the McClel- partment of the government. Ian voters of the State. Now let us hear what the freemen of the North have to say to the earth-defying and heaven-daring outrage.

State Committee. To be sure it was; the point CURRENCY AND LEGAL TENDER .- "Ours was intended to be a hard-money government." So | we made was not that we derived our position said an eminent expounder of the constitution, from the Address of the Committee, but that and history confirms what he said. The original draft of the constitution, like the Articles of Confederation, gave Congress power "to emit bills of credit," which, as interpreted by history and the Supreme Court, was power to create a pal er-money currency based on the credit of the government. After mature deliberation and aborate discussion, the convention struck out the lower by a vote of nine to two. When Congress has regulated the value of | that the Address itself was in good part written cein, the law of the contract gives an all-suffi by one of the Editors of the Journal. We have cient tender law, and there is little or no need no disposition to shirk responsibility of any for any other to secure or regulate the right of kind. The Address was written wholly by one tender. The power in no form is given to Can- o the Editors of the Journal. What of it? The gress, not even to make coin a legal tender. The contest was squarely between the Government (Lincoln) and the redection and the making of it a legal tender were necessary to its better circulation, still it would have to be shown that the making of it such was a "preper" incident to the power. This cannot be done. The power to rob citizens or dishonor the nation can never be a proper incident to any power.

No honest man will say that a power to raise forced loans is a proper incident to the power to be be shown oney. Yet, worse is done when the creditor is forced to take a third or a half in distance of the Administration. The contest was squarely between the Government (Lincoln) and the robels (McCielan Democrats). The end justifies the means in such an issue. It were better that half a dozen Massachusetts regiments should you than that the State should fall into the hands of the apponents of the Administration. Reduced to its pure elements, it is plain robbery of the private citizen for the funcied benefit of the paper-money experiment, to the injury of the national honor and eredit.

Be ides, the power to make paper money Leit gitself a mere inferred incident to some granted power, to allow this as an Incident to nat would be to permit a piling of incident upon incident to the utter destruction of the limitation of power intended by a careful specification of all powers intended to

According to the inexurable law of trade, the doubling or trobling of a full currency always doubles or trebles prices. This has been the should be thorough. And, furthermore, we have experience of all countries, and to none has it been a more costly experience than our own. It has therefore been a long-settled polley of Euro-I can governments to meet the pecuniary emergency during war by sale of government bonds at any reasonable discount rather than by an infla- 1c taken off, without their own consent, by tion of the currency. That discount is only one warming guerillas. sign lies causes much larger loss in the first in- in Kentucky, from the neglect to adopt proper stance, and it is a loss which is repeated from | 1 recautions in regard to the drafted men, has year to year for every year the war lasts. nerdful cost of the war. Perrowing being the only means for earrying on the war, the necessity for keeping up the bonds and the national credit that it is much to be feared that a loan in Europe Is no longer practicable. Instead of doing anything to ex tricate us from this unfortunate condition by a reduction of the currency, the empiries are seeking to increase the mischief by a further inflation, through a swarm of new banks of issue. This is done in disregard of the abundant experience of this country and France during their respective revolutious, and of the present experience tive revolutious, and of the present experience of the Southern States, that, after a certain point of depreelation in the entrency, its holders will cease to find in government, honds, preferring the 9th of November—a pair of hoots and spurs.

N. F. Tribme. cease to fund in government honds, preferring the chance of shifting off the currency to that of prolitably using the bonds after government credit as to both is destroyed.

It seems to be conceded now by even the Administration press, or at least by the more intelligent and respectable part, that the enormous extra prices which the people have to pay for all the necessaries and comforts of life, over the necessary result of depreciation in the currency, is a part and vastly the largest part of the tax they have to pay toward supporting the war. This too though the government gets no benefit whatever from that tax. It is a penalty the people are made to pay for a financial hlunder. To those who depend on fixed incomes or wages the inflation of the currency causes an Indirect tax to the full amount of the depreciation which is much heavier than would be an income tax of thirty per cent. This specimen of aholition skill in financier ing may be compared to that notable financial discovery made by President Lincoln, and with which he enlightened the world in a message to but it is easier to pay a large sun, than it is to pay a large one. And it is easier to pay any alarge one. And it is easier to pay any sun when we are able, than it is before we are able. This brillian financial discovery, it does not enlarge our national renown for wisdom, ought at least to warm the nation against ever again installing a had jets in the Press.

The military authorities at Baltimore have seized the New York soldiers' votes on the ground of alleged frauds. The law under which the New York soldiers are allowed to vote was prepared under the eye of the leaders of the Republican party, and ample checks were introduced to guard against illegal voting. It is now asserted that the names of dead soldiers have been appended to fraudulent votes. The inspectors of election in New York represent each party, and registry laws provide a record of the name of every legal voter. The saldiers in car ps put a ballot in an cuvelop, and that envelop in another, and direct it to some friend at home or to the State agents, who are probil . ited from opening the inner envelop, so as to detect who the ballot is for. Now, supposing John Smith, killed at Antictom, was a resident of any precinct throughout the Sate, and his vote should be offered next Tuesday. Does any one suppose that the Republican challengers and inspectors would not know whether he was a legal voter. The fraud v mld be detected instantly, and the ballot rejected. There can be and of this character, but there is great raft inducializer esemong the soldiers enselies, from the efforts of partisan officers It therefore looks as if the hallots which have Leen rerested at Paltimo e are genuine My-Clellan vote, and that they are going forward tool it. "That's what's the matter."

Mrs. vance had been killed the night before in an attack upon her husband, Jos. Vance, a worthy man. The perpetrators of this found deed were unknown, and are to this day. Young Dalton staved at his father's house on the night on which Mrs. Vance was murdered, and slept in the same bed with Captain Martin, who, a few weeks previous, had been a pilot for Gen. Paine on a trip to Jackson county.

Cuptain Martin was a man in whom General Paine had the utunest confidence as the writer. Captain Martin was a man in whom General Paine had the ntmost confidence, as the writer is informed. If Dalton could have had a trial, Martin would have testified to the fact that young Dalton slept with him that night, thus establishing his innocence of any participation in the death of Mrs. Vance. General Paine arrived at Hartsville, on Sunday evening the day after the killing of Mrs. Vance. He ordered his orderly-sergeant to neconpany Mr. G. D. Read, the biother-in-law of Dalton, to the house of Dalton's father and request young Dalton to meet him near Mr. Vance's house. The message was delivered to young Dalton and he premptly obeyed, accompanied by his father, and met Gen. Paine at the head of his rounmand. So soon as Gen Paine saw him, he ordered a file of soldiers to take and shoot him. Young Dalton was taken by surprise at this aununcement, and asked for the charge against him, but none was giren. [For the Louisville Sanday Journal.] HYPNOTIC HAPPINESS. BY MRS. LUCY WRIGHT. No. II.

Past pleasure doubles preacht palm,
To sorrow adds regret;
Rewret and hope are both in vain,
I ask but to—forget.

There is no period so remote in Andean history in which we do not find mention, either written or traditional, of the invigorating and care-dispelling powers of the leaf of the coca: the Erythroxyl n esca, of botanists. This must not be confounded with the plant which yields the coca hean, from which the abominable greasy decoction is made and veuded nuder the name of chocolate. The shrub which yields the coca leaf bears a close resemblance to the bitter haw tree, so abuildant in the valley of the Mississippi. It is indigenous in Peru and Belivia, on the eastern slope of the Andes, and Is adorned with bright green leaves and small white flowers, and rarely exceeds six or eight feet in height. Nature not furnishing the beloved leaf in sufficient quantity, it has become an in portant I ranch of Cordill ran agriculture, and out the pre-ent time, yields the prin igal item of revenue to whom oever happens to be the opher eral rulers of the revolutionary Scates in which it is me t largely cultivated. It is even cultivated at an all inde higher than the exhileration to which it gives rise when chewed; terraced coca plantation having been seen by travellers at a lei lt of from 0,000 to 8,000 fort allove the level of the sea, and that too where the mean tenderature does not exceed 68 de-

A coca tree attains Its majority in three years, and, under favorable circumstances, yields three crops of leaves annually. The leaf, which in size and shape may be compared to that of the cherry tree, when dried, emits an odor like that of sweet-scented vernal grass or melibit. and in quantity excites headache in those who are not acer stome I to the small which it evolves. The taste is not in like that of green tea, but is more intensely bitter and aromatic. In order to develop the real good, however, and scenre the genuine egen feutasia, it most be incorporated with slacked line, or the ashes of a plant. This is the practice of the native copy o, or coca-thewer, who whitewasles the ciling at 1 walls of his month many times a day with a brush of cocal aves dipped in lime. The first the following incident, which are simply true: care of the mountaine of Bolivia or Pern is to see that his che y for pouch of leather is well as it strikes against his staff. Thus composed, is he sensible to the demands of appetite. It is his friend, his food, hi strength, his happin as. In fact it is said that the corners is capable of enduring bodily fatigue without food and without sleep for a length of time that would prove fatal to a European, even should he remain in a state of complete inactivity. As an evidence of the bodily fatigue which the coquero is capable of enduring, we will cite an instance mentioned by Dr. Von Tschudi: "During the five days and nights he was in try service he never tasted any food, and took or ly two hours' sleep each night hours he remalely covered about a half orace of coca leaves, or I he kept an odli o (qu't continually in his up ut.i. I was contactly beside him, and therefore I had the opportunity of clocky of service line. The work for which I had engaged him being fit shell, he a some anied me on a two depolyments of a venty-three hogues aero s the level beights. Though on foct, he kent up with the pace of my male, and halted only for the inhogence in eoca. On gage himself acrain for the ame amount of work, and that he would go through it without ford if I would suply him with a sulfident amount of coca. The village priest assure I me that this man was lixty-two year of age, and that he had never known him to be ill in his life." | Travels in South America, by Dr. Ven Tsoluli.] The Apricultural Bure su at Wa hington should take measures to seeme the cultivation of this remarkable plant in the United States. How the "draft" would fl mrich! No more exempts on the score of antiquity. And then the forced marches, and half, even quarter, rations, that our soldiers could en lure, would furnish sufficient astonishment to supply the world with wonder for a day at lea-t. The South American, even at the present time, entertains a superstitious reverence for the coea tree. This feeling is probably traditional; for, in all the religious cerem mies of the Incas, it was the custom to introduce the cocain some form as an offering to their gods. The priests were never approached with an empty mouth, and those diviues masticated the leaf during the performance of Inca-mass. It is also the custom to fill the mouth of the dead with coca leaves; and if a native encounter a mummy, he falls to and stuffs its mouth with the precions leaf.

Silence and repose are essential to the full eajoyment of the coca, and therein it resembles oplum and haschisch, and therein, also, it diders from wine, which is enjoyed in its fullest extent and scenes of excitement. The preparation which the coquero makes, preparatory to the enjoyment of a chew, is refreshing. He seats himself in an easy position, with his chuspa between his knees, detaches the leaves, one at a time, which he rolls together and slowly introduces into his mouth; after this he dips a small wooden spatula into the gourd of lime. and transfers it to his mouth in the same slow. dignified manuer. The air of satisfaction with which the confirmed coquero thrusts his hand into his well-filled chuspa is only equalled by the expression depieted upon the courtenance of the miser when counting his hard-carnel boardings; and the woe-hegone visage of the coea-chewer, who contemplates an cuit; pouch, is only comparable to the face of a housekeeper with an empty basket, when feeliug for the last green-back in a Louisville market-house. Three times a day the poor, overtasked Indian gives himself np, hody and soul, to the enjoyment of the luxury so highly esteemed by his ancestors. The native Audean is the most melaneholy of the human race, and sits immovable for honrs in one position, ruminating over the former greatness of his people and the present goodness of eoca. It is the last and only remaining comfort of a once powerful and happy nation.

Pitiable and melancholy in the extreme would be the life of the dweller of the Andes, but for the care-dispelling virtues of the hypnotic coea. The affection which should ever be displayed by husband and wife, parent and child, is here never manifested. The husband, when not at lahor in the mine or field, remains all day moody and gloomy in his little eabin, musing on the hepcless and hapless condition to which he has been reduced by the bigoted de potism of Spanish in srule. This intensified melan-choly and total apathy is never better displayed by the native than when he is hypnotize i. For
